AUSTRALIA'S FIRST WORLD SURFING CHAMPION

It was in 1964 that a young surfer named Bernard "Midget" Farrelly, 19, of Frenchs Forest, became the inaugural World Surfing Champion. The event was one of the important steps that led to Manly and Freshwater beaches being declared a World Surfing Reserve in 2012.

Farrelly's victory came at a time when surfboard riding was still fighting for its place on the beaches.

At the time, some local councils were demanding surfboards be registered and when surfing was even banned on some beaches due to fears loose boards could hit bathers and injure them.

Midget remained a skilful and committed waterman for the rest of his life.

RIP 1944-2016
